They cut down trees, and they fought over women.

"Mother, I'm hungry."

"Eat. Eat bananas."

His [the younger brother's] two wives-to-be came. "Your mother told you to eat."

"Your husband doesn't like me, and you should cook food for him. Boil those haso taros in the pot there," he said. "Boil some haso taro for him. He's going to come back."

He [the older brother] came back. "Whew, hey, I asked them to boil haso taro for me. Didn't I ask the women?"

"Because you disobeyed me, you're going to cause me to suffer. You two go to him. Don't cause me to suffer," [said the younger brother].

"We don't want to go. His rear end smells bad. When he bends over, his rear end smells bad. His rear end is bad."

They didn't want him. He called them constantly. His younger brother was with them in the hammock. He was with his wives-to-be in the hammock, because they desired him sexually.

His older brother was ugly. They didn't like his older brother.

"Whew." He spoke. "Oof, they don't ever cook food for me." He came back. He didn't get water at the port. He called him. He called him as he lay in the hammock with his wives.

"Bakayona, Bakayona."

"Yes?"

"Come here. I'm going to make lines on you. Come here. Stand over here."

It was a saw. He got the saw.

"Where should I stand?"

"Stand here."

He intended evil for his younger brother.

His younger brother spoke to his wives. "Don't be upset. I don't think I'll die. I think I'll live. You get water for my mother at the port. Get water ready for my mother."

They filled drums with water. They got water in a container. They filled the drum, because there wasn't going to be any water.

"You take out my heart. You take it out. You cut out my liver, my intestines, my penis, and my scrotum, right," he said. "You cut out my penis well. Don't leave them by the fire. Leave them in a cool place. You wait for me. You two stay here. When you have stayed here, if you stay here, I will start up."

Then his older brother roasted him on a grill. His fat was dripping and sizzling on the fire. His brother roasted him. His brother ate him. He boiled him. He was on the roasting grate, roasted.

"Are you going to eat? Women, are you going to eat?"

"I guess we are going to eat. You go ahead and eat. I guess we are going to eat," she said.

"You two come here. I want to eat with you," he said.

He started up, and his voice started up. He turned him over. He turned him over again. "Tiii," he went. He started up.

His wife took his penis. She took his heart, too.

He picked the women up, to take them away up the stream.

Bakayona ate, thinking he had water; but it was about to disappear. The stream disappeared. The water didn't stay. The stream was bare. Bakayona ate, eating his younger brother. 152

"Oh man, I'm thirsty. Mother."

His mother was crying. She stopped crying, as she lay in her hammock.

"Your son said you shouldn't cry. Don't cry. You heard your son tell you."

He called his mother. "Wait a minute. Mother."

"What?"

"Mother, don't you have water?"

"I could have gone to get water, but I'm lying here. Did you eat instead of going to get water?"

The stream had already disappeared. He came back and ate.

"Just a minute, let me drink some water."

He ate, and then left.

"Just a minute, I'm going to drink some water."

He grabbed a brand from the fire. He waved the brand in front of him [to show the way]. He went waving the brand. There was no water.

"The stream seems to have disappeared."

He waved the brand to illuminate the stream. He went along slowly.

"There is no water."

He went upstream. His brand went out, and he came back. He went downstream waving the brand. He waved the brand on the stream, and then came back.

"Whew, look how thirsty I am. I'm thirsty. Look how thirsty I am. Mother, where is water? Mother, water. I don't have any water."

"Why does he keep calling me? You were eating and you didn't go get water. There is no water here. The stream disappeared."

"I went waving a brand, and there wasn't any water, not even a little. Just a minute."

He got ready to leave again. He picked up a bigger piece of firewood. He took the piece of firewood to the water.

"Look at how thirsty I am," he said as he went. He left. He went downstream. There was no water. The water was gone. He looked all over at the empty streambed. He came back.

"I want to drink water, and it is going to rain like it always does."

The sound of the approaching rain could be heard, botoririri. He opened his mouth, so the rain would go into it. The rain stopped.

"Oh, no, the rain stopped and I am still thirsty."

He came back. He came back for the time being.

"Look at how thirsty I am." He began to cry. "I'm thirsty. I'm going to be thirsty. Mother, give me some water."

"There is no water, so endure your thirst. You messed with my son. You ate my son, so endure your thirst," she said. "I never eat what you kill. I don't eat what you kill, but you cut up my son."

Then her son [the younger brother] took the water upstream and lived upstream. He lived there.

He had told his younger brothers to do something [when he was still alive]. "When my mother's water is all gone, when there is just this much left, you two come, come upstream."

¹⁵² There is confusion on which brother is named Bakayona. In the beginning Bakayona was the younger brother, but now he is the older brother.

The two of them went upstream. They shot arrows. Their older brother was sitting there. As he sat there an arrow hit the water. He was living where there were many fish. The arrow came.

They slept. They ate. He had made a riverboat, and it was big. The riverboat was there in the water.

"Younger brothers, put the things there inside. Let's go downstream. Put the things inside." They carried the things, to put them inside.

"Release the water. When you(pl) pick up the rock, throw it over there, downstream. Don't throw the rock into the water here. Throw the rock over there. Pull it hard this way. Pull the rock this way, as you sit in the canoe," he said.

They were going to go downstream and change into something else. The ones who were going to change into something else started up. They released the water. The sound of the rushing water could be heard. The water made a big rushing sound as it went downstream. The water went downstream. The alligator [the older brother] lay dead in the place where he had gone back and forth. The high water came to him as he lay there.

His father spoke. It was his real father. "My sons appear to have released the water. That's the sound of their water coming downstream."

The water came downstream making noise. The water came downstream with a rushing sound. They came after [the water]. They paddled. They arrived in the boat. They came onto the bank.

He called to his mother. "Mother."

"What?"

"Mother, is your water all gone?"

"My water is all gone. When my water is gone you are coming downstream. He didn't listen to me. The water is all gone. The vessel is there."

"We brought the water downstream, now."

The water flowed to where the alligator, the one who had eaten his younger brother and had changed into an animal, and who had gone around [searching for water], had died and was lying. He drank lots of water and his voice started up. "Obe, obe oo," he said, croaking, right where he always lay, because of the water. They turned into something else. They turned into something else when there were no Brazilians.

They went downstream. They are the ones who became the people of the governor. He went downstream. They were ready to leave. He put his father and the others on the boat. His father, his younger brothers, his grandmother, his nieces. It was all of them. He put them all on board. He took them downstream. They didn't live there [anymore]. All of them [left].

"Let's look at the place that will be our village. Let's go downstream. I don't want to live in this place here. I'm going to live far away, downstream. I'm going to live downstream," he said.

He put his father and the others on board. He was ready to leave, in the boat. His brothers and their group went downstream. The riverboat was big. There were canoes. His younger brothers paddled the small canoes. He included all the women. He took them downstream. They were Brazilians now. The one who would become the governor went downstream. Everything was empty. The villages were left alone, because everyone went downstream. Their manioc was not eaten. They went downstream.

He visited some people far away. He came. He came upon their village. He went back. "They are gone. Our affinal relative, who lived there, is gone. Our affinal relative is gone. Where is our affinal relative? I called out, and now I have come back. Let's go away, too. They went away. Let's us move away, too. Our affinal relative is gone. I think they crossed [the river]."

The river which was always there disappeared, and the people, too. The river that would become the Purus disappeared. Another stream is there. The water flows there. Where does the water come from? The water flowed this way. It had a rock. The water has a rock. They drank the water that set in the rock as in a pot. The water didn't dry up even though many people took water out. They always drank the water that lay in the rock, that was always renewed. They put it in vessels and drank it. They drank the water that was in [the rock].

They cooked food. They ate food, when they woke up. They also slept.

"There is no river, no big Purus River. There is no big river," the women said. "They went to get water, but there was no river, so they came [to the place where the water is in the rock] and drank water. We are always chasing water. The bare streambed is going downstream."

"I am drinking the water which sits [in the rock] and has a rock, because I am always thirsty. I ate meat, but didn't drink water, but now I have come and am drinking water here."

So they were ready to go.

"I think our relatives who were going to come are coming. They decided to come because they were suffering from thirst, and they heard about the water in [the rock]."

They got water with vessels. They bathed with water that was in vessels. They bathed. When they were done bathing, they drank water.

He drank water. "Glug, glug, glug, glug. Nyaa, they are drinking really good water."

"It's water from the rock. We are drinking water which was held back long ago by the rock. If it were earth, it would leak out."

The water was in something that was not earth. They drank water that was in the depths of the rock, my grandfather said, my father said. They drank water.

"Don't use too much of our water, when you are bathing. Put water in a vessel and bathe away [from the spring]."

There were lots of people, but it didn't matter. It was never all used up. Where was it? Who knows? Isn't that what is now Bosao?

They came. They drank water. They cut matafo vine. They let the water drip from the matafo into a vessel. They drank the water of the matafo vine, the water of a vine. They drank the water of a vine. There was never water.

"I have come, because I always drink the water of a vine."

They always drank water of a vine. They came and drank the water of the spring. The river will appear. The peach palm [nut] is what they ate. He brought peach palm nuts. He boiled the peach palm nuts.

"I always roast the peach palm nuts, because there is no water [to boil them]. I always roast the peach palm nuts. Roasted they are very good to eat."

He always roasted peach palm nuts. He brought the peach palm nuts. Now he boiled the peach palm nuts. He boiled them and they ate them. They ate peach palm nuts with meat. One of them went for water. He cut off a bihi bract where it was attached to the palm. If the end is sliced right, it becomes their vessel for water. The hawa palm sheath, which is long, which opens, and splits. He got water in the vessel. He put it on the ground. He covered his water with his wild banana leaf. He ate.

"My water is covered, it's going to leak out."

"The water won't leak out. The water is covered. The sheath is thick. We are going to be thirsty. We have been thirsty. We have always been thirsty, it's great to have this spring. The bit of water wets our insides. Why did the river disappear? If it all disappeared, what would we drink? I am drinking a little of the water that they found here. The water is not big, but it never is used up. They are gone, and I am seeing the trees that they cut down lying on the ground here, and there is nothing planted." They exclaimed. They could be heard exclaiming. "Where did they go? They must have gone across to the other side [of the river]. They must be living on the other side."

"They don't live on the other side," one of them said, because he saw their paddle stuff.
"There are pieces of broken paddles scattered on the ground, and other paddles stuck in the rafters. I think they went downstream."

"They went downstream," they said. "That's it. This happened to them because of Bakayona, the younger brother whose older brother killed him. The others blew snuff into Bakayona [to make him a shaman] and his older brother slit his back and roasted him, and he made the water go away. I know him. Now I know him. The women caused him to suffer. His older brother slit his back. His saw is hanging there where his grill is. There are no old pieces of his charred meat."

He came. He wanted to see them, and he came upon their village.

"This is their village. They aren't here, they are gone. They took all their things, and their old things are scattered on the ground: broken paddles, pots, and other things that were made. Pots, cooking pots. Pieces of broken pots are on the ground. There is also a stick on top. They left. I'm saying this because I see what they made. I saw the pieces of their paddles. The red pieces of stuff they made are scattered on the ground because they wanted them to be seen. Something thin like new leaves is scattered on the ground. They turned into something else because of Bakayona. Bakayona changed them, after they blew snuff into him. I say he changed them. People can change into something else that way. He changed them into something else, because they killed him. They killed him. His saw, its blade red with blood, is hanging there, the one he used to slash his younger brother's back. His wives caused him to suffer. Let him die. The voice of the one they made can be heard, the alligator, with the long jaw. He is in the water, and his voice can be heard. He says, 'Obe.' 'They went downstream,' he says. I heard him. His younger brother, who he ate, changed him. He lives there because he told him to."

Dear, what is the name of the alligator? Right, Bakayona. Right, it was Makayona. Makayona slit his younger brother's back, and the people changed into something else.
