ABA TOSI (1)

Free Translation

Note: While the possible connection of Aba Tosi and Mano Boni to currently living Jarawaras is not known, I have classified this story as a personal experience narrative because one of the minor characters, Bonikana, was an ancestor of living Jarawaras.

Mano Boni put a spell on a woman, Mano Boni who was a shaman. Mano Boni wanted to marry her, but she didn't want Mano Boni, because he mistreated women. She didn't want him because he mistreated women, and he cast a spell on her.

They went back to the village a different way because of him. He appeared at a different place. They went back. She went ahead of them, leading them to Mano Boni's shaman's stone without knowing it. She got sick because of the shaman's stone. She fell down when she hit against the line.<sup>23</sup>

"What happened to her?" they said about her. It was her older sister. Her older sister grabbed her arm and picked her up and sat her up.

"Mano Boni did this," they said. They knew about him. They knew that he had attacked her by putting a spell on her.

They came back. They held onto her arms. She was always almost falling, but she came back, keeping walking. As she came back, she fell and they stood her up. They picked her up, and took her on some more. They took her back. They appeared with her. She almost died.

Aba Tosi was there.

"What happened to my daughter?" her father said.

"I guess someone put a spell on your daughter. Who knows? She fell. We have brought her back," they said, the other women.

"Someone must be angry with her. Someone is angry with her," he said.

He called Aba Tosi. "Aba Tosi," he said. "Aba Tosi."

"Huh?"

"Aba Tosi, look at my daughter. Someone is angry with my daughter," he said.

Aba Tosi took snuff. They put her in a hammock. She was in the hammock.

"Don't leave my daughter. Suck on my daughter to cure her, and don't leave her. Sit by my daughter," he said.

So he sucked on her. He cured her. She took a long time to walk again. She was never the same as before, my grandmother used to say. He sucked on her. He waited for her. He rested, sitting. He sucked on her again.

Mano Boni didn't come back right away. When it was getting dark he appeared, after casting a spell on her. He came and lay in his hammock.

She didn't have an older brother. It would have been good if she had an older brother [to take revenge on Mano Boni].

The one who had cast a spell on her came and lay in his hammock. Aba Tosi had sucked on his victim. He sucked on her, and waited for her. He sucked on her some more, and then went to bathe.

<sup>23</sup> This was a string that Mano Boni had put a spell on with his shaman's stone, and had extended across the trail so that the woman would walk into it.

The voices of his familiar spirits could be heard. The voice of a spirit could be heard. He came back. He came right on into the house. He started working again right away, sucking on her again.

"Marry my daughter. Someone is angry with my daughter." So she married him.

Then he sent a spirit against him, too, because he had messed with his older brother.<sup>24</sup>

His older brother was cutting fish. He was cutting siraba fish. Two spirits that Mano Boni had sent against him went to him as he stood there. If a spirit had not hit him with its elbow, he would not have gotten sick. He was killing the siraba fish. As he stood there, he threw the siraba fish as the spirits were coming. They came. He was ready to go, and he was cutting the stingers of the siraba fish off.

They came to him as he stood there. "Are they fish?"

"They are fish. I am standing here killing siraba fish."

"He says he is killing siraba fish. Hoo, he says he is killing siraba fish, so he can eat."

"I am killing fatty siraba fish," he said.

"All right. Are you leaving?"

"Yes, I'm going home."

"Go ahead."

He caught him. The spirit caught Komane. The spirit caught him. The other spirit pulled down some vines to tie him up with. They tied him up. They tied him to a tree that was in the middle of a clear place in the area that floods in the high water season. He was there on the tree. Mano Boni had sent spirits against him.

His younger brother grieved. People take revenge. Mano Boni was always casting spells on people, and he got revenge on him.

They untied him. "Go home. Go and eat."

So he brought the siraba fish back. He carried the siraba fish on his back. He came back. He brought the siraba fish back.

His wife gutted the siraba fish, but he didn't eat the siraba fish. "Gut the siraba fish. You eat."

She gutted the siraba fish. She wrapped the fish. Her husband didn't work. The spirits had tied him up, because Mano Boni had sent them against him. She served the food. He slept. He fell asleep in his hammock. He fell asleep, and his wife shook him. He got sick. Aba Tosi got revenge against Mano Boni.

It was a scary thing when the spirits killed people. He was talking. She shook him so he would eat, but he said no. "You eat. I'm not feeling good. Someone sent spirits against me. The spirits messed with me, and I am feeling the effects of it. You eat."

Then Komane died, because the spirits had messed with him.

"He is strong, my older brother died because of him. I will get revenge." Then he sent spirits against him, too. "Go out in the forest, go out in the forest," he said about him.

Mano Boni went out in the forest with his wife. He went into the forest ahead of Aba Tosi. He went.

Aba Tosi got to work right away. He took snuff. He went after him. "He is strong, he sent spirits against my brother." He went there. He ordered spirits against him, in revenge.

The spirits scared Mano Boni. "Eee, leave me alone. Spirits, leave me alone," he said.

He went after hawa palm leaves, to make a basket for carrying food. He went after something to carry food in. He was fine when he came back to his wife.

<sup>24</sup> Yowao actually says younger brother, but later in the story it is clear that this was Aba Tosi's older brother.

"Why did you speak?" she said.

"I didn't speak," he said. "I didn't speak. Come on, you carry the bananas."

They went to get the bananas. They put the bananas in the basket. His wife carried the bananas. He didn't carry anything.

They came back, and they arrived. He was ready to bathe. "Let's go bathe. I want to bathe. I'm hot." he said.

He fell down at the port. His wife lifted him up, and he got back up laughing. "I fell down," he said. He had been fine before.

His wife brought him back, and he got sick. His wife boiled the food. She toasted manioc mash to eat with the bananas. Mano Boni lay in his hammock back at the house, after bathing. His wife was toasting manioc mash. She called him. "Aren't you going to eat bananas?" she said.

"I'm not going to eat bananas. I don't want to eat," he said. "You eat bananas," he said. "I will eat later," he said.

He lay back down, and slept. His wife didn't wake him up, because he didn't want to be bothered. His wife ate manioc mash with bananas.

"Mano Boni," she said. "Mano Boni, why are you sleeping, and not eating?" she said.

"I don't want to sleep, but I'm so sleepy I can't keep my eyes open," he said.

"The bananas are all gone," she said.

"Give the bananas to someone else. I don't want to eat bananas," he said. He lay back down again.

The others brought back monkeys. His wife brought back half of one of them. She put the meat on the fire. She went and shook him, so he would eat meat. "Mano Boni, wake up," she said.

"Hoo, I'm so sleepy, why doesn't she leave me alone?" he said.

"You can go back to sleep after you eat," she said. She went and shook him again. He started being crazy. It attacked him. The other shamans didn't want to come to him. They didn't want to suck on him, either. They didn't suck on him, because every time people told him to not kill people, he didn't listen.

"I don't know why Mano Boni went crazy. His wife is complaining," Aba Tosi said. "I'm going fishing. You listen to them talking about how Mano Boni went crazy."

He went into the forest. He went, and he speared fish. Mano Boni went crazy, and the others held onto him. He tried to step on his wife, but he missed his wife. After he missed her, she wouldn't help him anymore. So he lay back down, and went to sleep. She thought he was sleeping. They didn't take him into the forest to bury him, Mano Boni. We live at Kore, the place where Mano Boni's grave is.<sup>25</sup>

When Mano Boni died they buried him, and then they moved away. They moved away, running away from his smell. They came back this way, moving away. The one who had sent spirits against Mano Boni also came, and ate fish. He came and ate.

His father-in-law called him to go. "Father-in-law, go on ahead. We will go on behind."

"We are ready," he said.

"Father-in-law, go on ahead. We will go behind."

"Take the hammock down."

She took down the hammock, and put the hammock in the basket, their hammock.

"You carry the hammock," he said.

She carried the hammock. He carried the blowgun and the other things. They came. He had his father-in-law go ahead.

They arrived. They came upon the others building a house. He went on by and built a house.

<sup>25</sup> Kore seems to be the name of an old village, but Jarawaras today do not recognize the name.

He and his father-in-law put on the thatch together, baye leaves. They made the house. It was getting late in the day. When it was late in the day, he covered the top of the roof.

"What should I do?" he said. "I would go hunting, but the day is already ending. We will sleep hungry. We will eat manioc mash for now."

Aba Tosi liked his father-in-law, he never let him be far away. His father-in-law said he was hungry, and because of him he got up early. He went fishing, and he speared fish. He brought the fish back.

"Cook the fish. Your father is hungry."

His wife cooked the fish, because he told her to. Two of the fish were on sticks. "Two of the fish will be on sticks, to be for you, so we can eat them tomorrow."

His father-in-law was not well. So he worked alone.

He lived with his older brother, his other older brother. Ataro stayed with his younger brother. He worked with Ataro. He was his younger brother. He always found good meat. They were always eating.

He got wounded. A snake bit him. A snake bit him, and he lay in his hammock, sick. His older brother sucked on him to cure him. He got better.

As he lay in his hammock, Bonikana burned the hair off a titi monkey near him, and he smelled the titi. He smelled the smell of the titi, and it jolted him. You shouldn't smell a bad smell when a snake has bitten you. Then his older brother was upset. The snake jolted his younger brother.

His older brother sucked on him, and he held him. He was upset. His older brother sucked on him, but he died.

Then they grieved. Ataro grieved. He went into the forest grieving. He disappeared.

His voice could be heard before dawn as he approached the village again. "I burned the familiar spirits. I burned your familiar spirits, and they are there on the ground, burned up," he said, crying. He was carrying manioc stalks. He brought back manioc stalks, Boniwa.<sup>26</sup>

He grieved because his younger brother was gone. He brought back a giant anteater. He came grieving. "My younger brother, who I was always with, was killed. It was not familiar spirits that killed him. It was a snake that killed him. When you hunt, you should burn the hair off the animals far away," he said.

He was mad at them. "You hate my brother," he said. "I was curing my brother, but then my brother smelled an animal."

He grieved for a long time. He moved away, and came this way. He came this way, and lived over here. Then he went and lived over there. After living there for a long time, he forgot.

They wanted to have a festa. Then he discovered the aba fish. He came back. They wanted to have a festa, and they went into the forest. He went with them. He went into the forest. They stayed out in the forest. They stayed out there. They went into the forest to get game for the festa. They stayed out there.

"I'm going this way. You go the other way," he said.

He discovered the aba fish, the ones who live in the Curiá River. He went, and disappeared. He saw the aba fish. He shot animals with his blowgun. He came back carrying the animals, woolly monkeys. He arrived back.

"Burn the hair off the animals," he said. He went to the water to bathe. They burned the hair off the animals, and cut the animals up. They made a rack, and roasted the animals on the rack.

They talked back at the village. They were talking at night, and he spoke. "Uncle, uncle." "Yes?"

He listened to them. He told them the news, telling them about the aba fish. He remembered the aba fish. "The creatures in the water scared me when I found them, and I have come back," he said. "There are many fish in the water there." "We should live in a place where there is a good stream," he said. "You will see the stream that has a lot of fish."

"We will go there and see it."

They slept, and got up early to see the aba fish. Noki Maiyi, who would not be left behind, used to tell about it. They went with the women to see the fish. The fish of the Curiá were all along the edge, my aunt used to say. It was an untouched stream. They came back. They went after them. They went after them, and speared them. They washed the points of their arrows off, because the points of their arrows had iha poison. They washed the iha off of the arrow points and they speared the aba fish. They also shot animals with their blowguns. They discovered the Curiá, our ancestors.

Then they left them behind. "Come on, let's go home. Let the aba fish be in the water. We will come and see them again," they said. "We will come and live here."

Then they came back, and prepared the animals. They shot woolly monkeys with their blowguns, Noki Maiyi used to say. It was Noki Maiyi who used to say it. They shot woolly monkeys with their blowguns, and they came back. They got firewood, and the sound of them could be heard during the night. They roasted the animals on racks. They also wrapped the aba fish, and their voices could be heard during the night. They had discovered the fish of the Curiá. The aba fish of the Curiá didn't swim deep, because they had just been discovered, my aunt used to say.

They didn't go back to see them for a long time. Then they did see them when they were hunting. They had seen them, and had come back. They came back, and arrived back. They had a festa back at the village, my aunt used to say, telling about them.

"I'm so sleepy, I can't keep my eyes open," he said.'

<sup>28</sup> It is very difficult to hear this sentence, and Jarawara speakers disagree on what they hear. I have retained the content that Bibiri hears, but if this is correct, it is the only case I have seen of the continuous suffix -ne co-occurring with possessor agreement (i.e. in oni). It is also the only case I have seen of possessor agreement occurring without Tense.
